THE failure of the Conference which has been endeavouring for the past six months to adjust the differences between the British Houses of Parliament n regard to the veto exercised by the House of Lords leaves the question where it was in the Spring. Presumably nothing has yet been officially published beyond the bare announcement | that the Conference has failed to arrive at a settlement, but some idea of the considerations which have influenced the result may be gathered from a forecast of the Report, which it is perhaps advisable to add is taken from a London Radical newspaper. According to this statement the Report will declare :- " Firstly, that a settlement of the veto question is impossible without a reconstruction of the whole constitution, in cluding reform in the definition of the powers of the Lords, Home Rule in its widest sense, a redistribution of the franchise, and Imperial representation. Secondly, that the golden moment for such a settlement has come. Thirdly, that the present Conference must be replaced by a new Conference with a wider mandate and a fuller allowance of time." We do not think feeling on the question is so tense that the the Conference is likely to any cataclysmic

Radical party are likely to rave over the obstinacy with which the Lords representatives have held to the ancient rights and privileges of the Upper Chamber, the question in all likelihood will presently Lugard are expected to be present. The Band simmer down to projects of reform based upon the idea of obtaining a House of Lords which will represent the concentrated wisdom of the Empire and command its complete confidence. Many schemes have from time to time been laid before the country with this end in view. Conspicuous among them have been a scheme suggested by Lord Cunzon and another outlined by Lord ROSEBERY. When we read of the golden moment having come for a settlement which includes a reconstruction of the whole constitution, we can only wonder what is contemplated by such a phrase. The suggestion of Imperial representation indicates that reform in the constitution of the chamber has been considered, and as Lord ROSEBERY's scheme provided for Imperial representation in a chamber which should be based largely on the elective principle, and was laid before the House of Lords only six months ago, it probably figured largely in the discussion of the suggested reconstruction of the constitution. Not much however, is likely to be gained by an elective second chamber. Elective Upper clasps: Chambers have not been such a success in other countries that Great Britain should wish to reform her Constitution in this direction. The value of an Upper Chamher lies in its independence and freedom from cutcide influence, and to these an elected Chamber can never lay claim. As a revisory body such a! Chamber would have little advantage over the House of Lords as at present constituted, and the chief claim of the House of Lords China. to existence is as a revisory Chamber. Would an elected House of Lords be more in agreement with the House of Commons than the present Upper House? It may be doubted, more especially if the powers of election were placed in the hands of such bodies as those suggested by Lord ROSEBERY. The party returned to power in the House of Commens might find itself in a minority in the House of Lords, which, as an elected Chamber, would consider itself entitled to deal with measures much more stringently than is now the case. Ultra-Radicallem calls for a recognition of the predominance of the House of Commons as indisputable, but whatever may be meant by the phrase "reconstruction of the whole constitution" in the forecast of Conference Report, it can hardly involve a change of that description. From the reference made to " Home Rule in its widest sense" it may assumed that the discussions have pointed to a settlement which would involve the disappearance of the House of Commons as at present constituted, splitting it up into separate Parliaments for each of the part-interesting during the next few months. Sir Henry Berkeley, K C., returned to the Colony yesterday by the Empress of India.

THE CHRISTMAS MAIL.

Yesterday was a busy day at the Hongkong Post Office. It was the last day for posting | 880. parcels for Home for the Christmas mail, and not unexpectedly there was a procession past the Clock Tower of people laden with parcels of all descriptions. #### LOAN NEGOTIATIONS AT PEKING.

The G. $50,000,000 loan has claimed no small share of the Government's attention during the | munication usually being established on Thurspast week, writes the Peking correspondent of day morning. There have been cases where the N.-C. Daily News, for, although the project is said to have originated some months ago with Mr. Liang Tun-yen, ex-President of the Waiwupu, who is now on a mission to Europe, course, should be tendered to the Telegraph it is only within the past few weeks that active | Offices at the various points up country. negotiations have been carried on. It was not a difficult matter to arrange, as China is in pressing need of the money and the Americans were practically ready to weive the matter of security, whereas other financiers having to depend upon open markets for the sale of bonds: held tensciously to conservative banking ideas.

A week ago the Hawley Macey syndicate had apparently brought their negotiations for a £1.500,000 Manchurian loan to a successful issue; then the American group upset the field with an offer to lend G.$50,000,000, An interview was held at the American Legation between Duke Tsai Tse, President of the Ministry of Finance, H. E. Sheng Kung-pao, Vice-President of the Yuch uanpu, Mr. Calhoun, American Minister to Peking, and Mr. de Merocal, who represented Mr. Straight. British, American, German, French, Austrian, Japanese and Belgian financiers, in addition to a few international groups, were, meanwhile, offering large loans at comparatively small rates of interest, and H. E. Sheng Kungpao rushèd through a vague preliminary agreement, in which the terms were not drafted and no security was arranged. The next information that came to the ears of the public was that an Edict had been issued authoriting the Ministry of Finance to contract a loan of G. $50,000,000, at five per cent. for forty-five years. price ninety-five. It was freely stated at the same time that the matter of security had not been arranged and that some delay might be exnected before an actual settlement was reached.

In matters of loans and convracts with the Chinese Government early periods of flushed hope on the part of ingenuous foreigners not infrequently are superseded by anxious doubts and deferred hopes, as we have seen by the Chinchow-Aigun scheme and the Hukuang contract, and this big lean, which undoubtedly would be a splendid impetus to trade, begins to throw shadows of uncertainty. It is sincerely to be hoped, however, that it does go through and that America really intends to take an notive part in the financial reorganization of China, not merely to exploit the loan field on the strength of China's fr adship and the readiness of European bourses to quote loans and to sell bonds at rates of interest which would not be specially attractive to American investors. The fact, however, that Mr. Calhoun has been intimately connected with these negotiations is considered in the diplomatic circles of Peking to be an unquestionable guarantee of the highest good faith as opposed to commercial speculation mere political jobbery which unfortunately in the past, was synonymous with American diplomacy in China. Indeed, since Mr. Calboun took over the American Legation in Peking the continual friction that existed between Americans and other foreign elements in Peking has steadily waned, until to-day the confidence in the American Legation's single-minded honesty of purpose is fully restored. If there be any revival of political irritation, it will not emanate from Peking.

FALLACIES ABOUT PAPER.

Chinese rice paper, said Lord Redeadale, who took "The Ancient History of Paper-making" as the subject of his annual presidential address | place to-day at St. George's Chap-l, Windsor, in before the Royal Photographic Society recently, had no rice whatever in its composition. That curiously brittle, pure white material, used for the marvellous drawings of Chinese artists, was manufactured from the pith of a tree peculiar to Formess.

His Lordship also stated that there had never existed a paper made of raw cotton. The Chinese never used it, and history began with the making of rag paper, both in Arabia, more than ten centuries ago, and in Europe when the Crusaders, having brought the industry westward, the first paper manufactory was established in the last years of the thirteenth century.

Her Majesty the Queen and party from Balmoral paid a surprise visit to the county. capital, and proceeded to Dunnottar Castle, in order to inspect the venerable ruins. It now appears that the visit was marked by a rather amusing incident.

The visit of Royalty being entirely unexpected, the custodian of the castle was taken quite unawares, and had no knowledge, until after their departure, as to who his distinguished visitors were. These circumstances led to the following extremely amusing incident.

IMPERIAL YEAR.

SOME GREAT EVENTS IN LONDON IN 1911. Next year should be known as the great Empire year in the history of Britain and her overseas Dominions, says the Daily Mail. Three events of first-rate importance will cause the children of the Empire to gather in the Motherland. They are:

The Coronation of King George V.

The third Imperial Conference. The Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace. Granted a fine summer and freedom from home troubles or foreign complications, London, the meeting place of the world, should enjoy the brightest and busiest of seasons. In every respect London is better equipped for the pageantry of a great State function ! home-comers than she was when the coronation of King Edward VII. brought the world to her

Hotels, restaurants, opera houses, theatres, music-halls, exhibitions, means of conveyance, have all multiplied in a wonderful manner during the past decade. Its streets are wider; its private and public buildings are finer. Returning travellers declare that its people are better | ] manuered, better dressed, and more courteous. London, in short, is becoming the ideal host city

ROOM FOR THE GUESTS. But, it may be asked, can London find house and hotel room for the people who are coming in such numbers? Hotel experts ground which in days long goue by was trod by believe that the unheralded traveller, the hapless individual who is compelled find bost-room and house-room at a moment's notice, is likely to be incommoded by the great rush to England next year. For those who announce their intention of visiting London beforehand ample accommodation by sea and land can be provided.

The Strand, Piocadilly, Kensington, and Bloomsbury testify to the great increase in hotel accommodation during the last ten years. In the neighbourhood of the British Museum the change from the old boarding-house to the modern hotel has been very marked. There is probably no city in which the excursionist and traveller is offered a wider choice of accommoda-

If there is any scarcity of hotel-room next year it will probably be at top of the scale. The millionaire who hopes to find a room at one of the great hotels may himself compelled to lodge in humbler style; but the home-comer from the Dominions can arrange beforehand to be comfortably and not expensively housed in many quarters of London now rendered accessible by tube and motor, where formerly on account of their distance from the centre he would not care to go. THE KING EDWARD MEMORIALS.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LONDON.

The Lord Mayor's Committee of the Mansion | memoration of the late King's undergraduate House Fund for providing a Memorial in Lon- days at Cambridge. don to King Edward VII. have printed and circulated the suggestions which they have received as to the form the memorial should take. The list shows the wide differences of opinion that prevail in regard to the best method of commemorating the life and reign of his late Majesty. There are numerous proposals for the erection of commemorative hospitals, sanatoria. &c., parks, statues, and institutes. Amongst children other suggestions the more novel are :--

An Empire House to be built by Artisans of and from materials of the Empire. King in each town or village, with space for adapted as a centre for dirigibles and flying suitable inscription and addition of local details machines and as headquarters for the National

Lord Eversley has also printed and circulated a memorandum in support of his proposal for a Monumental Chapel associated with Westminster Abbey, which he has long advocated, He has now revived it with the additional suggestion that it should form a shrine, as it were, for a spacious monument of the late King on a scale like that of King Henry VII. by Torregiano.

These suggestions were not invited by the Committee, and the fact that they should be sent in such numbers and variety shows how keen is the public interest as to the form the memorial should take in Lendon.

THE WELSH NATIONAL FUND.

A fund to provide a Welsh national memorial to King Edward has been opened. It was thought that it would be in conformity with the late King's idea if a great national campaign were undertaken against tuberculosis, and it was therefore determined to combat the malady by three means—(1) education, (2) dispensaries, and (3) sanatoria. There have been some very generous gifts to help the scheme, notably two anonymous donations each of £50,000. Mr. David, M.P., has given £25,000, and other large subscribers are Mr. W. J. Thomas, Ynyshir, £5,000; Miss Thomas, Llwynmadoc, £5 000; Sir Alfred Mond, M.P., £5.000; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. C. Curre, (hepstow, £2,000; Miss Talbot, Margam Abbey (first donation), £1,000; and Mr. William Jenkins, Ocean Colliery Company, £1,000. Mr. David Davies, M.P., is treasurer of the national fund The Western Mail (Cardiff) has opened an auxiliary fund, and in the first 48 hours received subscriptions amounting to £10,000: A CAMBRIDGE FOUNDATION. Sir Harold Harmsworth has given £20,000 to found a Professorship of English Literature to be called the King Edward VII. chair, in com-

THE BIRMINGHAM FUND. The Daily Birmingham Mail King Edward Memorial Fund, opened four months ago, was closed last month. £27.516 7s. 74d, has been raised. It is proposed to spend £2,000 upon a statue of King Edward to be erected in Victoriasquare, and the remainder will go towards the erection of a new memorial hospital for LORD TENTERDEN'S SCHEME.

Lord Tenterden is circulating particulars of An Effigy in copper or bronze of the late his proposal that the Crystal Palace should be Aero Corps, which is to be started during the World's Aerial Exhibition to be held at the Palace during December and January next. The cost of purchase adaptation, and repairs is estimated at £600 000, and a further £100 000 for working capital would be sought. Lord Tenterden estimates a clear income of £150,000, of which £100.000 would cover the expenses, leaving £50,000 for extension and a reserve fund.

A P. AND O. SENSATION.

PLIGUE OUTBREAK ON THE "HIMALIYA. The P. & O. steamer Himalays, which arrived at Bombay on the 27th ult., reported that there had been seven cases and four suspected cases and three deaths from plague among the stewards. No illness had occurred among the 330 passengers, chiefly ladies and children. A Bombay telegram adds: "The Company is An earlier telegram reported that the

P. & O. s.s. Himalaya on arriving at Marseilles from London reported that three Goanese kitchen hands had been under suspicion of having plague. Two of them had already been buried at sea. Afterwards three further suspects were landed at the Marseilles quarantine station. The ship was disinfected, and the departure delayed until the 13th ult. The Company received a wireless message, dated 15th October from the Himalaya, stating that all the passengers and crow were well. On the 16th Reuter cabled that a Goanese steward of the Himalaya had died of plague in hospital at the Royal Albert Docks, London, so that the trouble had apparently commenced on the homeward voyage.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. THE POWER OF IMAGINATION

C. J. WINTER.

If anyone in the course of conversation with Greville Basset happened to mention anything about the power of imagination, he was generally favoured by that gentleman with a poculiar cold and searching stare, intended to find out if the observation was made in pure innecence, or if the person making it had heard things connected with his past, and was pulling his log.

The fact of the matter was that the subject was somewhat painful to Greville Basset, Esq. M.P., and to speak the truth he had every reason to feel sensitive about it, although not one soul in the world had the least compassion for his respectic ; the matter excepting myself, the reason being that no one-save any-knew the whole facts of the case.

I am now about to impart them for the first time, and so the funder will be in the poculiar position of knowing the whole matter while all the principals concorned in its transactions only know in part.

On the sixth of November, 1901, while dining at Lady Maurice Ransome's, someone dropped a chance remark about the effect on the mind of cortain illusions, giving as instances various phenomena vouched for by people of the very highest standing.

It frequently happens that a remark of this kind starts a conversation that takes a long time to boat dry, and in the present case some dozons of curious happenings were hauled into the light with the result, that long after the ladies had left for the opera, and the room was draped in a fleesy curtain of tobacco smoke, the aubject rolled merrily on.

Factions were formed: there were those who held that all the so-called authenticated mystories had no real substance, but were simply an effect on the mind which could be accounted for by hard fasts, while others stoutly averred that miraculous occurrences did actually take place under certain conditions.

One scoptic was boldly to the fore in all these latter cases: this was Basset. Shrewd and levelheaded, possessing a very mutter-of-fact mind he constantly reiterated the same retort-" pure imagination, my dear fellow, you thought you saw it, it didn't really exist, you know," and so "I remember." said Colonel Thurston, "on two separate occasions and in different parts of India-once in Mysore and once in Bombay-1 saw the famous mange trick, and nothing to my . dying day will persuade mo that the little plant did not actually grow up in front of my very eyes: moreover, I'll find you half a dozen honourable English gentlemen who will bear me out "Simply an effect of the imagination, Colo- ${f nel.}''$   ${f replied}$  Basset,  ${f replie}''$  I will not deny, of course, that you really believe it yourself, but the whole affair is too marvellone to have actually taken place: your imagination was worked upon, that is the only explanation, and your eyes deceived vou. I can recall an instance which happened to my own wife," continued he. "It was after - that unfortunate affair of my son, when he suddenly left-you will excuse me going over itbut my wife woke me up one night and told me she had just seen Robert standing by the bed, and had had a long conversation with him, in which he had asked her to plead with me for pardon and the rest of it, and to let him know if he might return home again. Of course it was pure imagination, she had -dreamed it, but nothing will shake her opinion that either he, or his spirit in tangible form, came into our room that night.

"Now you know, either a thing happens-in which case something always occurs to prove - its reality-or it is nothing more than a vision of the mind—a delusion with nothing to confirm it and absolutely no existence except in the abnormally sensitive or perhaps hypnoticed mind of the one who sees it: I have a book or two on the subject, and as I have an appoint ment with Dr. Stegamen in helf an hour and shall be near your home, I will call in and bring them round to prove my point."

After a little more talk on the subject Greville Basset rose and left, saying he would be back inside the hour.

It was not often he referred to the unfortunate incident in his life as he had done to-night: the subject was, of course, most painful to him It will be remembered that his son Robert, who was known privately to be leading a very fast life. had suddenly disappeared, leaving a note to his father in which he said he could face him on account of the debts contracted and various entanglements. This was some five years ago and the blow had almost broken the heart of the boy's mother. Everything had been done to try to find him, but without avail, and although Basset had lately moved into another house, and do e all in his power to try to take his wife's mind off the sad subject, yet, motherlike, she continued to grieve, her health had broken down, and she was not the same woman as of old. It was to the doctor who attended her that Basset now went, and after the consulta-

At the time the above conversation was in full swing, the garden of the newly-acquired house belonging to Greville Basset lay in profound quiet. The well-trimmed and bushy laureled hedge gave no unusual sound when shaken by the keen east wind which had sprung up and brought with it a touch of frost which har. dened the paths and dried the stones as white as linen. Everything loked exactly as usual when suddenly a husky voice-modulated to a heavy whisper - broke the stillness.

tion he drove home to get the books he had promised to take back to convince his friends.

"Gent," said the voice, "I reoken new's the with your permission we'll get to business."

Another voice answered and a covert conversation was kept up for two or three minutes. at the end of which the bushes were stealthily parted and there issued therefrom two figures; one tall and stalwart, the other thin almost to emeciation. Both were long overcoats, and if all the five millions of people in London had seen them, not one perhaps would have guessed that these same overcoats were literally lined with steel in the shape of highly-tempered and cumuingly constructed burglars' tools, yet such was the fact.

These two man represented the summit of the old and dishonourable profession of burglary. The younger and bigger man, by his upright and gentlemanly appearance, might easily have been taken for a titled gentleman. The other, however, was a very different person. He could never have passed for anything but a member of the "lower five," for notwithstanding his fine clothes, there was something about him suggestive of the slums. His keen ferret face and small bead like eyes coupled with a certain startledand nervousdemeanour, although stamping him with extraordinary souteness, gave him an undoubted air of the low-down cockney. Incongruous as was their appearance, they were evidently in perfect consonance with regard to their neferious undertakings. Many were

The thin, keenfecod man -at a nod and muttored "There's your knees in front of the safe and began dexterously plying the thin bright skeleton keys, while the taller man went over to the desk, pulling the drawers noiselessly out, turning them upside down on the floor and securing everything of value that came to light. Small choice ornaments and costly relies speedily found their way into his keeping, and while the other was patiently working away at the safe, he opened another door and found himself in an elegantly furnished bedroom. He soon returned with a precious store of jewels, and valuable ornaments which quickly found their way into the canvas bag which had received the things already collected

Meanwhile the door of the safe swung silently back and the eager but cautious lingers of the thin man removed the outbox which at once followed the other spoils. A keen glance revealed a bundle or two of papers and these Formose osla erow.

Another room was visited, more drawers emptied and more valuables added to the already costly store. So quickly and systematically had they worked that'in twenty minutes they had gone through all three rooms and amassed enough to satis; even their rapacious instincts. It had been to phonomenally easy job from the first. drawers had been found oven, nothing had to be broken, they had struck lucky from every point of view, and a moment afterwards saw them stoalthily disappearing, carrying with them perhaps a thousand pounds' worth of valuables, and leaving behind them a scene of indescribable confusion. Soon after the disappearance of the two men. Graville Bassetarrived home. He went straight to the library, secured a comple of books and was just going to leave when he remembered that ther was another one in the study that might be u sful. He opened the door, snapped on the light and stood transfixed with amazement at the bavee he saw in front of him.

The first thing that claimed his attention was the safe with the wide-open door. He went across to it, putting his fact at every aten amongst the litter from the drawers, which hay in hears all over the room. One clance revealed that his cash-box as well as his most important papers were gone. Ho entered the other rooms and was confronted with the same terrible confusion and muddle; his wife's jewel-case had disappeared as well as many valuable herrlooms, this he could see at a glance doubties a careful scruting would reveal a total less of thou-

He strode towards the bell for the purpose of calling the butler up, but on second thoughts he decided to wait and consider which was the best course to follow. At all costs his wife must not know without due preparation: the shock-considering her present state of health -would have most disastrous effects. Ivo, he would wait a little before making the affair known, as hour or two would make little difference and in the meantime his wife would be home from opera with the other ladies, and he could tell her quietly, thus saving a nervous shock.

Closing the door again he descended the stairs, and before going out, told the butler that in case Mrs. Basset happened to come home before he returned, she was to be kept in either the drawing-room or the dining-room until he arrived and he would explain. Also no one was

He jumped into his carriage and drove back to Ludy Ransome's to await his wife's homecoming and incidentally to tell his friends what had

The two cracksmen-weighted with their haul-had but a very short distance to go. Some bundred yards away from the mansion which had received their attentions, were a number of fairly large houses whose backs almost adjoined the end of Greville Basset's warden; and to the back door of one of these the two men directed their steps after climbing a couple of low walls.

A few minutes afterwards they were scated in a well lighted and comfortable room, and immediately began to examine their plunder. It was undoubtedly a big night for them, as the long array of valuables, which the tall man was placing on the table, testified, to say nothing of what the cash-box would reveal when the ounning fingers of the other had solved the trick of the lock. Carefully and patiently he worked away, now throwing saids the wire key he was using and selecting another. Meanwhile the face of the man designated by his companion as "Gent" was screw d into a perplexed frown as he handled the various costly trinkets and examents. The expression was one in which the keen glance of the connoisseur was blended with a certain troubled look of recognition as if the things he held were partially familiar to him; and once, when he held up a curious gold-mounted agate scentbottle, he seemed powerless to remove his eyes from it, but gazed with an earnost, faraway expression for so long a time, that the other man looked up from his task o riously.

"Why, Gent, what's the matter, what's come over you? Something wrong ?" said he. "I'll swear I've seen this somewhere," replied the other slowly. "I believe the mater" he pulled up suddenly realising that he was about to go farther in the matter of confidence then he intended. A look of intense interest sparkled in the keen, ferret eyes of the other, as if he expected the "Gent" to draw saids at las, the well that hung over his past. Croppy Owen-king of skeleton-keys and experi safe-breaker-was fully aware that his companion came of a good family and had had a university education; indeed it was the origin of the refix "Gent," which Croppy himself had bestowed on him when they first met. The name had stuck to him and "Gent Sm th" he had remained ever since.

luck which seemed to follow him about. A somewhat awkward silence fell between them for a moment, and then Croppy bent his head over his task again.

A minute later a sharp click announced the fact that the lock had given way to the masterly attention of the expert.

Yes, there was money there—a goodly sprinkbunchy sheaf of crisp notes in another.

The Gent's eyes immediately sought the box Scotland Yard that two of the most expert as the lid was lifted, but it was not at the hard money that he looked. A bundle of papers For a moment they remained taking stock of claimed his attention, and these he took up with the windows in the house, listening intently the | hands that trembled slightly-a most unusual while then noiselessly they entered the back door thing with him. He twisted off the elastic and disappeared within. No sound fell from band which held thom, and the trembling betheir feet as they boldly traversed the passage came more pronounced as he drew a long fat and mounted a flight or two of stairs. For a couple of minutes a dead silence reigned in the room, and then with a quick movement Gent Smith folded up the paper and proceeded to place it carefully back into its envelope. "Croppy," said he carnostly, when he had effected his purpose, "we have done a few jobs together, you and I, haven't we?-jobs which have not only brought us a decent sum at our bank, but have made us known as the kings of

"Very right, Gent, replied Croppy, perfectly correct, and we'll do many more of the same kind, you may bet your last 'a'penny on that." "We may do, " said Gent Smith slowly, "it's possible, but-"

" May do and 'possible," said Croppy looking up with startled eyes-"may do? Why you don't surely mean that you think of chucking the business, now of all times when we know the ropes so well?"

"We'll leave that phase of the subject for the present, if you don't mind, replied the other, "the fact is that something has happened semothing very important and I want you to le me a favour - a very great favour, Croppy mind I'll see that you are no loser by the deal. You may have noticed that I was rather worried all the time I was looking at the things; you see I felt sure I had seen some of them before, they brought back memories: now after a look into that paper I find that these people are very great friends of mine, they are-well, I'll show the with and trust I put in you and tell you what I mayo hitherto kept a profound secret from everyone-the fact is, Croppy, I have to-night robbed my own father and mother. They must have moved into this house recently, although it is strange I have not heard anything about it, for I try to keep myself acquainted as far as possible with their doings. So you see, Croppy that this musta't go on. I'm not wonderfully particular as you know, but I draw the line at this, and so," continue I he, lowering his voice and speaking deliberately, "I want you to do a hard thing-nothing short of packing up these things and t king them back, or the shock will about kill my old mother."

"Whow," whistled Croppy Owen, "that is about the tallest order I've ever heard of. Put em back? Why it's unnatural; who ever heard of-well, guvner, that wins it.'

"I told you I'd see you were no loser, didn't Understand that I rend enough in that paper to show me that the cld-my father has releated and forgiven me. He has made me his heir again so that I get his fortune when he dies, and it also shows me that I have only to go back to him to be received and reinstated into my former position, when I will make this right with you. Come now, quick, let us get to work, I know you're not going to fail me.'

Croppy Owen hesitated as if uncertain what to do, but his look of perplexity gradually gave way and he sighed gloomily.

"Well, Gent, you were right when you said it was a 'ard thing," murmurod he, ' it is 'ard-crool 'ard. Why, here's a thousand pounds' worth of stuff, we get it away clean an clever, an' now, when we 'ave our 'ands round i we've got to put it back. Well, if you say so, I'll do it. You're Gent by name an' I know you'll act like a gent when the time comes, so

"Croppy, you're a pal," said the other putting his hand on his shoulder, "and you'll never

Quickly they let to work; the things were soon packed into the bag again and the secand journey commenced. On reaching the garden they found every thing as quiet as when they had left half an

Again the thick stair-carnet held the secre of their footsteps and a moment afterwards they fell to their extraordinary task. It was as i Croppy said "unnatural," but nevertheless they performed it with as much dexterity as they had displayed on the previous occasion. The cashbox slid into its place in the safe, and in a very short time the lock yielded to the persuasive keys of the expert, and the door was looked Meanwhile Gent Smith had been replacing the various ornaments with unerring accuracy. Each drawer received its scattered contents and took its proper place in the bur an. Chairs were replaced in position, folds smoothed out

"It's the rummest job I've ever undertaken in my life," said Croppy, "and I'll see that doesn't occur again, but I must admit that we've done it all right.

They did not hang about long, as you me guess: at any moment they might be surprised fact just as they reached the passage at the bottom of the stairs, they heard a ring at the bell which was immediately followed by a stir in the neighbourhood of the kitchen. They were outside in a flash and gained the laurel bushes unobserved. "Just in time, thank God," said Gent Smith, which I think you will admit was rather a pious and significant remark to fall from the lips of the prince of burglars,

When Greville Basset got to Lady Maurice Ransome's, he found the men in the billiard room and in a few momenta had related what "Have you informed the police?" asked Colonel Thurston.

"No," said Basset, "you see I did not want to cause any alarm if it could be avoided, and although the matter must of course come out, Among other qualities Croppy posses ed great I thought perhaps we could soften it down

"But how about the servants." said Sir "Not a word. When I found what had

"Well, what do you say if we come along hom. with you," said Barelay, "we can pick up a policemun as we go, and can then do a great before your wife comes home. Then you can . tell her at your leisure."

This suggestion found favour at once and in B few minutes the party of four set out. They arrived without encounter ng a policeman, however, and before going to fetch one, decided to have a look at the rooms.

For Bronchitis

"Its curative effects are remarkable."

109 Messina Avenue, West Hampstead. Dear Sire,-I have for years been a sufferer from chronic bronchitis. Three years ago I wrote for a bottle of Angler's Emulsion, and found so much benefit from taking it that I have since never been without it. Its curative effects are remarkable, and I consider is invaluable in bronchitis. My little grand-daughter has also been greatly benefited by its use. She is troubled with a persistent cough, which only yields to the Emulsion. I have recommended it to many of my friends, (Mrs.) H. SMITH. (Signed) and shall continue to do so.

HEALING AND STRENGTHENING.

Angier's Emulsion soothes the lungs and air passages, allays inflammation, makes the cough and breathing easier, and facilitates expectoration. At the same time it promotes appetite, helps digestion and builds up strength. No other emulsion has the same soothing, cough-allaying, lung-healing power, nor the same tonic effect upon appetite and digestion. Angier's Emulsion is invaluable in lung affections, digestive disorders, nervous affections and all wasting diseases. It is the most perfact and most palatable of all emulsions.

NEEDS NO COAXING.

Many other Pens do, but with the "Swan" it is simply a case of reversing the cap to write-that's all! It does not leak, splutter or scratch, and the ink is supplied both above and below the pen point—the natural way- and so the flow is constant. There are no complicated "works" to understand, and no trouble in filling.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

AN ADJUSTABLE WIRELESS BECEIVER. The magnetic detector of Ressi signals the arrival of Hertzian waves by changing the twisting oscillation of a fine iron wire stretched in a magnetic field. Two bir magnets are in line, parallel to the wire, with like poles, pointing in opposite directions. The wire carries a small mirror at its centre, and is surrounded by a wire coil traversed by an alternating current having a frequency equal to that of the torsional oscillation of the stretched wire around its axis. The mirror escillates with the wire. Placed in circuit with the antenna, the degree of oscillation of the stretched wire is diminished whenever it is traversed by the high frequency currents produced in the antenna by the arrival of Herizian waves, and the signals so received can be recorded photographically by a ray of light from the mirror. This receiver, unlike others, can b made to respond only to special waves. It can be adjusted for various frequencies, and is affected only by trains of waves of a very small range of frequency.

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT IN LIGHT. "Light without heat" was found twenty years ago in a large Cuban firefly. In the "Photinus Pyralis," a smaller firefly common in Washington, Drs. H. E. Ives and W. W. Coblents have now made a more complete investigation. and have found the luminous efficiency to be 96.5 per cent. as compared with 0.4 per cent. for the carbon glow lamp, 1.3 for the tungston lamp and less than 4 per cent. for the mercury are, the most efficient artificial illuminant. The firefly light, being green, is not adapted to human use. It is possible that white light may be built up by combining the emissions of severa substances like the firefly material, and then the efficiency might reach 45 per cent.

A NEW AIRSHIP ALLOT. 'Ruebel bronse, a new German alloy of magnesium, sine, copper and aluminum, has considerable strength and the specific gravity of water. Used as the metal of a Zeppelin airship, the weight would be lessened nearly 4 tons.

PORTABLE WIBELESS. The military wireless telegraph of Major Beddington, of the British army, is very portable and can be put into operation on the field within 15 minutes. In a late test near Keswick, messages were sent and received over a distance of 161 miles, although a hill 1,800 feet high was interposed between the stations, the probable effective range being estimated at not less than 40 miles. An ordinary two horse-power motor-cycle engine is used to drive a dynamo to produce the electric discharges, and the impulses are sent through 100 yards of double copper wires suspended between two 24 foot poles copper wire gause mat on the ground gives earth connection. The apparatus is readily carried on horseback, the mat-weighing four times as great as that obtained from carbon 200 pounds-being the heaviest load, while the motor and dynamo weighs only 170 pounds, and the poles are attached to a pack saddle in 6 foot sections.

PAINT FOR MONUMENTS. The stone preserving compound of R. M. Caffall is a mixture of paraffln with creesote dissolved in turpentine, and is designed primarily to protect against atmospheric action, while the paraffin prevents organic growth. This is the material with which was checked the docay of the pink granite Egyptian obelisk that was set up in New York in 1881. On its new site the obeliak began to weather rapidly, and in 1885. when the protective coating was applied, 780 pounds of loose chips were removed. The hesting of the surface necessary in applying the moisture—the melting point of which is 140deg. F.-did not have the injurious effect feared. The heat caused the substance to be absorbed to the depth of half an inch and 673 pounds were applied to the 200 square yards of shaft and plinth. In the 25 years since then the stone has shown no decay.

THE MINERS' PIRE CURTAIN. A curious kind of automatic fire curtain was described at the late Duesseldorf Mining Congress as a French engineer's device for stopping the spread of mine explosions. Planks thickly covered with powdered schist are placed in the upper part of the gallery, and when an explosiou occurs the displaced dust forms a neutral zone that checks the firedamp and protects the part of the mine beyond. Buckets of water so arranged on the planks as to be easily upset are

A metal for the bearings of machinery cheaper than the usual ones containing copper-has been sought by W. Guertler in a soft matrix of lead imbedding iron or its alloys as hardening material. As lead and iron do not mix in a molten state, an intimate mixture of the powdered metals was prepared, either by precipitating dilute lead solution with iron powder or grinding iron power and "lead-tree" crystals together, and the mixture was heated to 250 deg., or 300 deg. C., and stamped in moulds. Various iron alloys may be used instead of pure iron. The products compare favourable in mechanical qualities with the more expensive bear. ing metals of copper in lead or tin, and can be readily produced. The stamped metals are regarded as true alloys, obtained without fusion. Similar products were obtained by Friedrich by kneading, with one or more of the constituents in a pasty condition, and these also are pronounced genuine alloys.

JAMAICA MEAL. Banana meal is among the food supplies that is rapidly extending in use. It is made by drying and grinding the unrips fruit, and the meal has a chemical composition very different from that of the ripe fruit. When well ripened the fruit contains 70 per cent. of sugar and only 1 to 2 per cent. of starch, while the meal has nearly 80 per cent. of starch and only 3 or 7 per cent. of sugar. A special banana "cocoa" is manufactured in Switzerland, and is claimed to have a fine aroma and highly nutritive value. Several analyses have shown that Jamaico banana meal contains 12.77 per cent. of water: 2.45 ash: 4.69 protein (0.75 nitro. gen); 78.32 non-nitrogenous substances, 1.28 crude fibre : and 0.49 fat. ... ALL ROADS IN ONE.

A unique story is told by a bit of road exhibited at Brussels. A third of a mile of avenue ending at the Civil Engineering pavilion is divided into sections of two yards, each section representing some type of road employed by civilized nations, and the whole giving a graphic history of roads from those of ancient Rome to the most advanced modern type, and showing the kinds used for foot, horseback and carriage travel.

THE OSRAM LAMP: A BRIEF MISTORY.

The "Ogram" lamp was commercially introduced to the English market in the early part of 1907. It was then only possible to make t for use on circuits whose pressure did not exceed 120 volts and of candle power not over 50 This necessitated the lamps being restricted to low-voltage circuits, except in instances where they could be run two in series on high-voltage mains. For house and shop lighting a 50 c.p. lamp was sometimes found to provide too high an illumination. The huge factory that has been erected at Hammersmth by the General Electric Coy. for the manufacture of Osram lamps is now. employing over 1,100 hands, so that it is evident rapid progress has been made; and after various stages of improvement, lamps suitable for burnin on pressures not exceeding 260 volts are now being preduced. The company have also been successful in making lamps suitable for pressures up to 135 volts in 16 c p. And lamps suitable for pressures up to 200 to 260 volts as low as 25 c.p. This has enabled the Osram lamp to be used in practically any building where the old form of carbon lamp has already been at work. It might be of interest to point out that the Osram lamp has now been brought to such a stage of perfection that the current consumption is only approximately I watt per candlepower, which is about 75 per cent. less than that taken by carbon filament lamps-in other words, an Osram lamp only takes approximately one-quarter of the current of a carbon filament lamp. The Osram lamp, it is claimed, is unaffected by vibration, and these lamps have been used for a considerable time in all the leading reilways in England as well as in the colonies. Also in many instances Osram lamps have been used, with great success, fitted in clusters on fittings suspended from tramway poles. They are in use for street lighting at Hampstead, Hammersmith, Marylebone, Wimbledon, Canterbury, Exeter, Acton and many other towns, no complaint being received from these places that they do their work inefficiently. The great efficiency and the long life of the lamps have, in fact, enabled the Corporation authorities, we are informed, to compete successfully with gas, and in most instances the corporations are able to show a great saving in yearly cost after receiving an increased illumination. The life is three or

RHEUMATISM. LUMBAGO & SCIATICA.

Rheumatism, Lumbago and Scintica are three of the most common and mos painful complaints and practically arise from the same cause and the names only distinguish the location of the disease. If the arms and legs are affected it is willed Rneumatism: if in the Loins, Lumbago; and in the hip, Sciatica. The attacks are generally brought on by chills when the body is overheated, or by exposure to damp or cold draughts, which act, not upon the boncs or muscles but upon the Uric Acid in the Blood which is the cause of the disease. The failure of the Liver and Kidneys to filter and absorb this Acid leads to an accumulation in the system, tends to close the circulation, and harden the tissues forming the blood vessels. Thus every movement of the affected parts causes you intense agony. The pains are affected more or less by cold or heat. A damp day. will double you up, or the warmth of the bed will intensify the pain. Rheumatism is generally regarded as one of the most difficult ailments to cure, and invariably medicines are tried simply with the hope temporary relief. Dr. MORSE'S INDIAN ROOT PILLS have been wonderfully successful not merely affording a constion of the pain, but by driving the poison out of the blood and restoring the joints to their original suppleness. They get at the cause as no other remedy does. They get at the foundation of the complaint which is the blood and a trial will abundantly prove the wonderful efficacy of this remedy.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Budapest is laughing about an "affair of honour which was to have taken place between two Hun ariaus, a house-owner named Moritz Solwarz and a commercial traveller named Isidor Weiss. They had come to blows in the course of a quarrel, and their friends decided a duel must be fought. Seconds were chosen, and these met duly at the fencing school, where the combat was to take place. But no principals made their appearance at the time appointed, and at length a messenger boy arrived with a note from Herr Weiss to say that he could not come because his mother had fallen iil, and this was followed by a telegram from Herr Schwars asking to be excused on the ground of his wife's indisposition.

COUNTESS PASSES AS A MONK.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Journal states that a woman of great beauty, the Countess Kluzinska, has just been arrested after passing eighteen years as a man in the monastery of Solowestsk, where she was known as Brother Arsene. The countess, who is now about forty years of age, was the heroine of a much discussed love affair, the Morning Leader states. A duel foug t between her lever and her husband ended fatally for the latter, and the lover, conscience-stricken, retired to the monastery of Solowestsk. The countess, unable to bear the separation, disguised herself, and, to be near her lever, gained access to the convent, and lived there unsuspected during all the eighteen years. NEW CLYDE GRAVING DOCK ..

The Clyde Navigation Trustees have ununimously adopted the report and plans of the special committee on the proposed graving dock and the acquisition of Ronfrew Ferry. The committee, whic was appointed nearly two years a co, decided that a graving dook, of greater dimensions was necessary, and that the finanical position of the least justified the trustees in taking steps with a view to its construction. Plans which had been prepared by the engineer were approved generally, and wore submitted to the Admiralty, who assured the committee that the dock would be suitable dimensions of the dock as shown on the plan are

it is no paradox to say that the victories or the Law Courts are won on the river and the cricket

There seems no reason to doubt that within the next few years the Thames will be spanned by another bridge. The Bridge House Estates Committee have pussed a resolution recommending the City Corporation to promote a Bill in the forthcoming session of Parliament for powers to widen Southwark Bridge and alter its levels and to proceed with the building of St. Paul's Bridge. Both improvements are urgently needed. The proposed bridge will cross the river between Southwark and Blackfriars. It will have a width of about 80f. from parapet to parapet, and its northern spproach will end in Cannon street. Having regard to the vast convenience it will afford to vehicular and pedestrian traffic, the two millions sterling to cover its cost will be money well spent, especially as not a penny of that sum will come out of the rates. It seems almost incredible that until the end of the Eighteenth Century London, with a population of nearly 900,000, was content with three bridges only-London, Blackiriars, and Westminster; but it must be remembered that the traffic largely was from east to west, and that the watermen's interests were much more powerful than they are at the present day. Waterloo Bridge—originally intended to be known as the "Strand," followed in 1817, and then came Southwark Bridge, built for a private company, and opened on March on 24, 1819. Tolla were levied for 45 years, but at last they were abclished and the bridge afterwards purchased for the public at a cost of £200,000. In its present form, the bridge has passed the limit of its usefulness, and the money for lowering its gradients and increasing its width will be money wisely expended. Hunger-Bournemouth, Wyo Valley, Severn Valley ford Bridge was erected in 1845, but it lasted only 18 years, being replaced by the existing South Eastern Railway bridge at Charing Cross. Then came Lambath Bridge now closed to vehicular traffic, the railway bridge across the Thames at Cannon-street and Blackfriars, and others at Putney, Battersea Chelsea, Hammersmith, and Wandsworth. The old Vauxhall Bridge has been replaced by a new bridge at a cost of some £300,000. The Tower Bridge was thought to be the last word in Thames bridges, but St. Paul's is coming, and another has been suggested in the neighbourhood of the Temple.

Practical Elecution. By EDWARD S. STEPHEN-BON. Hongkong: Kelly & Walsh, Ltd. This book has been specially compiled and written for Eastern students of English, and consists of a selection of the best stories of East and West. The stories are short, humorone and written, as the author says, with a view to simplicity and approximation to the spoken narrative form—the natural basis of elecution. It is a book for beginners, and the author, who is an instructor at the Imperial Japanese Naval Engineering College, and the author of "English Customs, Etiquette, etc.," promises a later book for more advanced students.

Military Japan. By J. C. BALET, translated from the French by C. A. Parry, B.A. Hongkong : Kelly & Walsh, Ltd.

In this book of more than two hundred pages. we have a detailed account of the Military and Naval forces of Japan. The author informs us that this volume is intended to be only the first part of a more extensive work; the next volume will be devoted to the economic resources of Japan, and a third will treat of Social and Intellectual Japan. "Military Japan" comprises two parts: the first and much more important deals with the Army, its history and present organisation; the second part, which is reduced to short descriptions and some lists, is devoted to the Navy. In his preface, the author

The present moment is a particularly favourable one for taking stock of the Japanese army and navy. The post-bellum programme of army expansion is virtually completed; that of the navy, which is more costly and demands a continuous improvement, is still going on. It is unlikely, in fact, especially after the convention with Russia, that the number of divisions will be increased to 25, whereas a new maval programme is imminent. The second Katsurs | Sunday. Ministry—the first was in office during the war with Russis - marks a period of cossation in the military preoccupations of the government and seems to be devoting itself particularly to financial reforms; in doing which it is certainly conforming to the wishes of the nation, tired of exploits which are too costly.

The new sword is forged, but it must rest unsheathed. Japan is content with keeping its blade well-polished and its edge keen. When and against whom will she draw it? These are questions which it would be at present premature to try to answer.

makes it of great value and interest to all who desire to learn something of the military genius of the Japanese people, which in so short a time has put the nation in the front rank of military and naval Powers.

Life and Sport on the Norfolk Broads. By OLIVER G. READY. London: T. Worner Laurie.

early days spent in the heart of the Norfolk Broads. Mr. Ready, whose service as a Commissioner of Customs has made him well-known in China, may truly be said to be "at home" in his subject, the has produced a volume which is amusing, descriptive, and always interesting. The book will especially appeal to all East-Anglians acquainted with the bird-haunted seaboard of Norfolk, and all sportsmen will take a keen delight in the quaint sporting proclivities of "Old Tom Rudd" and the "Rarverend." The author, in spite of his "years of exile" in the Far East. still retains a keen memory, with a happy knack of describing incident and detail contemporary. with the "good old times," and this brightly written story should make a welcome addition to all libraries.

The Hyena of Kallu. By LOUISE GERARD. London: Methnen & Co., Ltd.

"The Hyene of Kallu" is one of those absorbing stories, which the reader is disinclined to lavdown until the climax is reached. From the humdrum life of the needy in England the scene is transferred to the wilds of Nigeria, where the drama is unravelled. There "moving incidents by flood and field." and tragedies domestic and otherwise hold the attention of the reader. Mental as well as physical struggles prevail, but in the end the invocent survive and the "wicked cease from troubling."

The Danger Mark. By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS London and New York : D. Appleton & Co.

A story of life in the American smart set and of the wiles of American financiers. The millionaires of the New World are all supposed to have hobbies, and the particular foible of the one in this story is that his grandchildren should be reared on model lines, which he lays down in his will. The lives of the children, a boy and girl, are governed by a trust, t e ruling principle of the head of which is "the cultivation of the individual." In their early years the children are debarred from the companiouship of other youngsters, but with the decline of youth they seek to indulge in worldly pleasures. The objections of the trust are overcome, and the young man and woman debauch in the follies of the hour, but successfully negotiate the pitfalls by the way and ere on the road to happiness and reform at the end of the story.

Little Aliens. By MYRA KELLY, London

Longmans, Green & Co. This is a series of sidelights on the educational problems of New York. The Yiddish, Polish and Russian children of that great city, born to poverty, destitution and perhaps crime do not seem attractive material for any novelist, but this gifted authoress writes about the Little Aliens with so much sympathy that the work becomes entertaining as well as instructive. The stories of a teacher's struggles with this raw material, her trials and pleasures, are pleasantly interwoven with the glimpses of lowly life afforded by the incident, which give character to the sketches. True, the broken language of the aliens is somewhat difficult to follow, but it has to be admitted that the tales give ample reward for the little effort involved. The stories are certainly original. Who, for instance. would have made a poverty stricken mother don the rich garment given to her daughter, wearing it so that it covered her back while she "wore", the baby at her breast to make up for the deficiency of the coat?

DISORDERS DUE TO NERVOUS EXHAUSTION. THIS BUSINESS MAN IN BURMA FOUND STRENGTH AND CURE IN

DR. Williams' Pink Pills.

SO CAN YOU.

The symptoms which afflicted Mr. J. A. Joseph all clearly indicated the cause of his trouble. His was a case of Neurasthenia if ever there was one. Yet all the medicines he took, even those prescribed by his physician, failed to care him, and his condition went from bad to worse. It was the old story of trying all the wrong methods before finding the right one-of a vain effort to dispel symptoms by the use

MB. J. A. JOSEPH. OF MANDALAY. of aperients and temporary tonics, instead of getting at the root of the trouble by rebuilding the nervous system—through the blood. In the hope of saving other victims to Nervous Breakdown much of the suffering he underwent, and of showing them the "shortout" back to perfect health, Mr. Joseph, who, it must be stated, is a prominent building contractor at Mandalay, gave permission some short time ago for the following facts concerning his case to be published.

"The strain and worry of business was the primary cause of my health giving way some vears ago." said he, " and in spite of every effort I made myself, and of all that was done for me. I continued to lose ground. A feeling of utter weariness and listlessness took possession of me. Everything I did was a trouble and I only wanted to rest. I was constantly drowsy and could have fallen asleep almost at any moment of the day. I became so short of breath that even the effort of walking upstairs left me gasping. Palpitations and pains in the chest troubled measo much that at times I thought my heart was bursting.

"Severe pains followed even the lightest meal; often I vomited what I had eaten. My stomach became further weakened and irritated by the many specient and other medicines I took, until eating was a positive misery, and I dreaded even the thought of solid food. So acute was my weakness that my hands and legs oftentimes trembled and shook, and I felt that I should drop with exhaustion.

"The physician I consulted at this time told me plainly that I was suffering from Acute Debility: I had been under his treatment for some time, yet steadily getting worse and worse, when I chanced to read one day a newspaper article telling how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had cared a case of Debility which apparently was even worse than mine. So I got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pells, fully determined to give them a fair trial.

"Marked improvement was not noticeable at once. I did not expect that it would be: but by the time I had reached the third bottle the change for the better was remarkable. My nerves were steadied and braced up, I had such an appetite and ate with such enjoyment as I had not known for a long time. Steadily and surely my strength returned. The paluitations diminished by degrees until they ceased entirely; I was able to work hard at my business once again without feelin | unduly tired; my digestion became normal, enabling me to take substantial food without any pain or inconvenience whatever. Through the use of these wonderful Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People I ultimately became fully restored to health, and I have remained strong and well ever since. It gives me pleasure to relate this experience now so that others afflicted in the same manner may know of the one certain and natural remedy for Nervous Debility."

Mr. Joseph's address is 82nd Street, Mandalay, Barma.

They supply Rich, New, Revitalising Blood; that is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured countless cases of Anamia, Ma aria, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, Eczema, Skin Fruptions, and the special nilments of ladies. Obtainable from medicine vendors everywhere, and from the China branch of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 84, Szechuen Boad, Shanghai, 1 bottle for $1.50, or 6 bottles for $3, post free. OSRAM LAMP

WHAT IT DOES electric light bills. IT BENDERS ELECTRIC LIGHT ABSOLUTELY

THE CHEAPEST ILLUMINANT, and thus brings this mode of lighting within reach IT PAYS FOR ITSELF in about 150 hours on account of its great current-saving Properties. THE 17 WATT: (app. 16 H.C.P.) OSRAM LAMP GIVES 20 HOURS LIGHT THE

FOR ONE PENNY. THE 40 WATT (app. 32 H.C.P.) OSEAM LAMP gives 25 hours light for the consumption of one unit of current. THE OSRAM LAMP has an average life of over

2,000 hours, and during the whole of that period its initial c.p. is practically undiminished. IT CONSUMES only approximately 1 watt per Hefner candle-power as sgainst 4 watts consumed by a carbon filament lamp. GET THE WORD "OSRAM" TO ON EVERY

SOLE AGENTS FOR THE IDEAL LIGHT. THE OSRAM LAMP

WHAT IT DOES NOT IT EFFECTS ENORMOUS REDUCTIONS in IT DOES NOT deteriorate in light even after IT DOES NOT, although its initial cost is more, PROVE AS EXPENSIVE AS AN ORDINARY

CARBON LAMP, for it lasts FOUR times as long, and consumes one-quarter the current ALL THE TIME. IT DOES NOT require any special installing, burns in any position on any lighting circuit, and fits existing lampholders.

OSRAM LAMP DOES NOT BLACKEN. IT DOES NOT GET HOT. The OSRAM Lamp, although giving four times the light of a carbon lamp, does not generate heat to any extent. This, added to its other advantages, makes it the ideal Lamp for private houses. THE HIGH CANDLE-POWER LAMP DOES NOT take as much current as the Enclosed Arc

Lamp, and is rapidly displacing this latter form of lighting, being cheaper in first cost and cheaper to maintain. SEE THE WORD "OSRAM" IS ON EVERY

TYPEWRITER REMINGTON

(WHICH WAS THE ORIGINAL TYPEWRITING MACHINE)

has always been, and it is to-day the "RECOGNIZED LEADER AMONG TYPEWRITERS."

The annual sales of the Remington Typewriter greatly exceed those of any other writing machine.

The number of Remingtons in use throughout the World to-day is greater than that of any writing machine, combined.

BECAUSE

IT IS UNPARALLELED IN QUALITY.

The very name "Remington" stands for strength and reliability in a Typewriter.

At the Brussels International Exposition the Remington Typewriter Co., in accordance with their well-known practice for several years past, did not enter into any competition for Prizes or Awards for their machines.

Having been awarded innumerable distinctions at all important exhibitions for many years, the Company decided some years ago that this kind of advertisement was no longer of any advantage to them, and therefore discontinued to enter into competition at exhibitions.

CAUTION.

Beware of skilfully renovated old Remingtons, sometimes put up in original packing, which are on the market just now and sold under various descriptions, such as "Re-constructed," etc.

They are offered at very low prices, and though APPARENTLY new are in reality quite worn out and valueless.

For Prospectus, Prices, etc., apply to:-
